The contents of the 'bottle' which stood for some time in the hall and then church, have recently been counted and banked. A grand total of £119.23 was raised and will go towards the organ fund. Many thanks to Linda for the original idea and supplying the bottle, and to all those who contributed. The bottle will re-appear in church from mid September, so again you will have somewhere to dispose of your loose change.

Harold Brown, organist of St Chad's

Today we mark the 100th anniversary of the death of Lance Corporal Harold William Brown FRCO, 3rd Battalion Worcestershire Regiment, organist of St Chad's until his death, aged 32, on 12 August 1917. A brass plaque near the organ in the chancel gives some information on him, including the fact that he gained his FRCO (Fellow of the Royal College of Organists) - no mean achievement and proof of a high level of musicianship.

He lived at 21 Birch Lane, was most likely unmarried, and is commemorated on a memorial at Birr Cross Cemetery near Ypres. He seems to have been one of six siblings. Roger writes; "Although none of us knew him, of course, I personally feel a bond between him and me, stemming from our shared rôle as organists, linked across 100 years by our love of the organ and its music." As a tribute to Lance Corporal Brown, Roger will play his own Elegy no.6 to conclude our service. We give thanks for Harold's contribution to the worship at St Chad's and celebrate the continuation of his legacy through the musical ministry of Roger, Robert, Ken-son and many other organists over the years.
